

General Description.

The soil of this township is of such a nature as to afford remarkably fine grass. The eastern portion is sheltered on three sides by a high range and affords excellent protection for cattle in winter, while the basin so formed is amply watered by numerous small springs whose waters sink within a few chains of their source.